ANE, CRAWFORD & Co. HAVE RECEIVED. A

NEW MODEL CABINET ORGAN Six sets of reeds-Twelve stops-Swell and RESERVE FOR EQUALIZATION OF ? August 19. DIAMANTE, Britishsteamer, 514 Mc- Grand Organ, Knee levers and FITTED WITH PATENT QUALIFYING TUDES.

INTIMATIONS.

By means of this invention an Organ containing Two or Three sets of reeds becomes equal in volume and power, and greatly superior in brilliancy of tone to an ordinary Organ of six or eight sets of reeds.

The invention consists in the construction and application of tubes of wood of certain fixed proportions, placed so as to operate in connection with the Dispason and Melodia sets of reeds, each tube having an opening on the upper side through which the air (subsequently passing through the reeds) enters, and through which the sound escapes, thus producing fullness and richness of tone together with refined and sympathetic quality. N.B.—THE TUBES NEVER CHANGE IN PITCH

BUT SIMPLY QUALIFY THE TONE. SUITABLE FOR EITHER CHURCH OR DRAWING ROOM LANE, CRAWFORD & Co.

HONGROVA, AUGUST 20TH, 1496. THE Mission to Thibet which Mr. COLMAN MACAULAY has taken so much trouble to equip will not, after all, proceed to Lhassa. Reuter tells us that it has been countermanded owing to the Chinese Government apprehending local difficulties. In return for this piece of consideration on the part of the British Authorities, the Peking Government have engaged to promote trade between India and Thibet. It is much to be regretted that this expanition has had to be abandoned, not so much perhaps in the interests of commerce, which will no doubt be developed gradually as the Thibetans come to understand that aggression is not intended, as in the interests of geographical and ethnological research. A trade of some importance between India and Thibet already exists, via Nepaul, but it is intended. in future to make Sikkim the channel of communication from Darjeeling. The following particulars of the trade of Thibet, compiled by the Times of India, will be found of considerable interest at the present mo-

Exhausted nature can stand it no longer, and in a few minutes he sinks down upon the ground, and stretches himself out as if about to die, lying in that position sometimes as long as twenty-four hours without moving. When he is able to stand up, the process is the horse's part, and after half a dozen lessons of the kind his education is finished,-"Across the Pampas and the Andes," by

ROBERT CHAWFORD, M.A. LIFE ON A HOUSE-BOAT. "Early to bed and early to rise" is a motto which is generally carried out with considerable strictness on board a bouseboat. Life, in fact, commences at an hour when the only sounds to be heard are the lowing of an ox in some neighbouring meadow, the soug of a lark overhead or of a thrush in an adjacent thicket, or the splash of a fish in the stream alongside. Business begins, or should begin, with filling the next. the stove in the kitchen, and then comes the NANELA TERRACE. Rent Moderate. morning tub. Thu, for those who can swim, usually takes the form of a dip in the river. well commenced, if a man is not afraid of falling flat or of knocking his bead against the bollom, by a plunge from the top of the hoat. By the time the bath is over and flinnels donned for the day, the kettle boils, and the making of tea or coffee is succeeded by the cooking of fish, or eggs and baconthings which, with the addition of marmalade, seem to form the staple of house-boat ! breakfasts. If a boy is employed to come on board for an hour or two to do the dirty work -as is frequently the case-the washing of the breakfast things will of course be left for him, but otherwise it will save a lot of trouble to attend to it at once. And then will probably come a trip to the shore to replenish stores, to fetch newspapers, and to call at the post office for letters. The house-boat, if it has been wisely placed under the shelter of some ancient trees, will form the most comfortable lounge during the heat of the summer noon, luncheon being provided from the larder which, by the way, should be always kept well stocked with plain biscuits and preserved provisions to guard against accidents, such as a andden influx of visitors; or a pouring wet...day which may remiler communication with the above unpleasant, Sketching, reading, and writing will serve to while away the afternoon, and a couple of hours' row or fishing, or both combined, will probably precede dinner. A gentle paddle Kowloon in the gathering twilight may possibly succeed in due course, and by ten o'clock, or thereabouts, beds will be made up, the solitary light extinguished, and the boat wrapped till morning in such darkness as an English summer night allows. All days, however, are not so placid and unoventful as this. Visitors are frequent, and it is amusing to those men who have been long enough domesticated on board their floating home to become familiarised with their surroundings, to witness the wonderment with which things that seem natural to them are regarded by the new-comers, especially ladies. That flowers should be grown in pote on board a house-boat is a neverceasing source of surprise; so are the little adornments with which the interior of the cabins is generally decorated; whilst the various contrivances for economising space and promoting comfort are regarded with mingled desiration and amazement.—Cassell's Magazine.

THE HOMES OF THE ANCIENT ROMANS.

The internal courts were usually constructed so that each was surrounded by apartniente which, when lighted from within, prevented the domestic concerns of the family from being overlocked by snyone not included within the walls. From a passage in Plautus, it does not appear that this construction always answered the purpose; and
